Not illustrated. 1787 Excerpt: .to two lotteries of l, COO, OOot. each; and, in the following year, to two lotteries of 1,800,0 ol. each; these are the first cut red in the manuscript book a! bvc mentioned; and it is there stated, th. t they were allowed, as To the two first, for their pains-and service in receiving, paying, and accounting for the monies received, and for all their charges and expences in performing this service (the charges of passing the accounts excepted) 2380l. 1 zs. gd.; for the two latter they were allowed 12 50l. each. The receipt of these contributions is attended with different degrees of trouble and expence. The number of tickets and subscribers varies in different lotteries: in the most simple, the whole business is the receipt of the money, the payment of it into the exchequer, and ihc payment of the certificates of the fortunate tickets; in others it is attended either with the creation or redemption of annuities: hence the allowance to the bank for this service has varied, according to these circumstances, from tcool. he sum craved in the memorial before us, 10 2000l. the sum allowed them in the years 1772, 1774, and 1775 The remaining allowance, which is that for the charges of management, commenced with the grant of annuities in the year 1714: the two acts of that year, above alluded to, empower the conamiilioners of the treasury to allow, out of the sum granted for the payment of the...
