Not illustrated. 1893 Excerpt: .the day-room should be separated water-closets, specially designed so as to be cut off by a fresh-air space from the building proper; the lavatory and baths, with hot and cold water, store-room and ward-scully, all connected with deep drainage and almost perfect sanitary appliances. I may say our South Australian system is as nearly perfect as obtained in any part of the world at present, as inspection will illustrate better than words. A well-flushed glazed fsecal trough, and a cupboard for excreta requiring inspection by medical officers should be contained in the closet arrangements. Access direct, either from wards or day-rooms, should obtain from ambulatory verandas and balconies, etc.; these should be on all sides, to allow patients to have the benefit of sun or shade, according to the season of the year or time of day. On the opposite end of a large ward to day-room, etc., should be the room of the sister in charge or head-nurse, with glass door giving full view over ward, also a small ward operating and casually room, store-room and a separation-ward of three beds for special cases. This room should have double doors and be equally as well ventilated as main ward. Repeat the ground-floor plan on first floor, with the balconies, etc., and the accommodation is at once doubled. External fire-escape stairs should be provided from balcony. In our hospital we have provided an Otis hydraulic-lift for patients and to send up dinners, etc., to first...
